About

My journey in sailing began when I joined sailing school in Poreč at the age of 7. Over the years, I've accumulated 10 years of sport sailing experience, along with several leisure trips across the Adriatic. Starting on small sailboats taught me to deeply respect the sea, and I believe this foundation will make me a reliable and safety-conscious skipper in the future. For the last five years, I have been studying psychology at the University of Zagreb. My background in psychology gives me confidence in my ability to connect with people of diverse backgrounds and communicate effectively, and I am dedicated to understanding the unique needs of each client to ensure they have an enjoyable and memorable sailing experience. In challenging situations, whether it's a security issue or addressing an uncomfortable topic, I know I can communicate thoughtfully, professionally and with care. I'm also passionate about planning and organizing trips, making sure that every aspect is taken care of, and I recognize the importance of flexibility on any trip, as each client has their own vision of the ideal experience. Combining my love for the sea with my interpersonal and planning skills feels like a natural fit, and I'm excited to bring this unique blend to life on the water.
